Prior preparation provides perfect platform pre-planting

Know your soil type – You can decide:

- a) If you want to plant different varieties based on your soil type, or;
- b) You can adjust your soil for the varieties you want to plant.

The simplest way to do this is with a pH Test Kit. Once you know the pH level, our staff can assist if you want to change your soil, or help you pick plants based on its type.

Colour Your World...

Contrasting colours look great in large multi planted pots. Take a colour wheel with you to the garden centre or grab some paint sample cards. This will help you decide what plants go together. Soft pastel colours help create a cooling ambience to an area, while brilliant strong colours will help warm an area.

*If it seems a bit Fishy,
That's a good thing!!*

A number of fertilisers contain seaweed or aquatic materials (including fish) – why is this good for your garden on dry land?

Of all the fertilisers, seaweed-based fertilisers have one of the broadest and most balanced range of nutrients. Promoting early flowering and cropping and increasing the sugar content of fruit, all in all, it's very good stuff.

Just like some soil mixes -

Fertilisers also come in very specific formulations designed to give that type of plant the best ongoing growth and health.

How well do you know your Lawn?

What ever type you have (or even multiple types), this is the best time for making it look its best.

Top Lawn Tips:

- Aerate your lawn to allow good drainage and air to get to the soil and roots. There are plenty of tools around (or get a kid to run around on it in their footy boots)
- Weed and Feed: Hopefully, you already started this at the end of winter while the weeds were still small. If not, you can still do it now
- Seed any patchy areas
- Add a slow release fertiliser to maintain it over Summer

Be Water Wise...

There are now a great range of products on the market to help your garden retain water and protect your plants from the heat.

Perfect for:

- Drought affected or drier climates
- Sandy soils
- Saving on water bills
- Watering less often so you can watch the cricket!

And remember, compost is a great source of moisture and nutrients too.

There are now even more heat and drought tolerant plants available, with more being developed each year.

Australian natives look good, but they also provide a home and regular food source for many Australian fauna. Consider varieties such as correas, banksia, grevilleas, eucalyptus and the distinctive colour range of the kangaroo paws.

Greening the Great Indoors (or smaller spaces)

There are studies showing plants help our mental health and well-being. This is especially true when it comes to plants indoors or smaller spaces.

Not to mention improved air quality –

1 medium sized plant leads to a 25% increase in air quality.

Check out the NASA Clean Air Study for a list of plants and the toxins they remove.

And who said you have to have a yard to have a composter, veggie or herb garden?

Red Hot Tips For Tomatoes

- Before planting your tomato seeds or seedlings, apply well-rotted manure or compost to the soil.
- Think about companion planting.
- To prevent floury tomatoes, avoid overwatering when the fruit is close to ripening.
- Be very bug vigilant.

Fun Kid's Tip:

Plant a combination of Tomato, Oregano, Basil and Capsicum and create your own "Pizza" Garden.
